Building.

New York, April 15.—Manchester seemed to set the pace in cotton. Livyrpool fell into line, and then New York. Prices here ran up sharply on July, while May was not far behind it, and other mouths were also hoper. According to a Liverpool dispatch, there was a large business day in Manchester yesterday. Many spot dealers at Liverpool, it is said, will sail at once for New York to buy what they term "cheap cottor" after the May tenders are issued. This is described in the same dispatch as "showing the acutences of the position and the good trude here." Also the Liverpool stock continues small.

Futures advanced 10 to 25 points, the latter on July closing very steady. Estimated sales, 250,000 bales.

Criminal Court No. 2.

The Public's Pulse

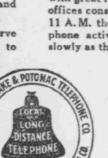

THE PUBLIC NEVER KNOWS, by the service, when a central office has its busiest hours. Studies based upon conditions obtaining in different parts of the city, guide the organization of the operating force to care for rush periods and insure uniformly prompt service throughout the day. A proper reserve force is always available for the unexpected.

"North"-The traffic curve of a central office in a residential district illustrates the domestic telephone activities of the day. Until 7 A. M. the enormous plant lies practically idle, but at that hour commence the hurried calls to the provisioners, etc., gradually increasing until 8 A. M. From this time until 10 A. M. the curve rises sharply, and at the latter hour the traffic-largely shopping and marketing calls-is the heaviest of the day. As the luncheon hour approaches the curve falls gradually, and the traffic continues to decrease throughout the afternoon-with one interruption at 2 P. M., when the after-luncheon engagements are being made. At 5. P. M. the curve rises rapidly again, continuing upward during the dinner hour, until at 8 P.M. the bulk of the evening traffic is handled. From this hour the social calls gradually decrease, and the curve falls slowly until midnight.

"Main"-In the business district different fluctuations are shown. At 7 A.M. the first activity is evidenced,-the early calls of the marketmen and retailers, -but not until 8 A.M. does the traffic show a conspicuous increase. From 8 A. M. to 9 A. M., as the business men begin to reach their offices and proceed to answer correspondence and conduct the details of their work by telephone, the traffic increases with great rapidity. Calls to the government offices constantly augment this traffic, and by 11 A.M. the peak of the day's business telephone activity is reached. The curve falls slowly as the lunch hour approaches and rises again shortly before 1 P. M. At 2 P. M. the traffic falls off noticeably, only to rise again at 3 P. M., when the afternoon curve is at its height. From the latter hour the traffic decreases gradually until the close of the business day. Calls from newspaper offices, hotels, and transportation companies continue until midnight, and prevent the evening curve from falling suddenly.

A telephone plant must be built large enough to carry the maximum traffic load. This fact increases the plant investment and operating expense considerably over what it would be if there were a fairly uniform distribution of the traffic during the entire day.

HE SUITED HER.

"The man I ever wed." she said. "Must have accomplishments.
Yes; he must play, and sing, and

The man who won her lily hand Was bald and stout and slow: Yes; he must play, dance,
And ride, and row, and fence.
And take a skillful hand at bridge.
A tennis racket wield.
And chase the bounding golf ball, too,
too,
Toose the dewy field."

Or fence, or ride, or row,
He didn't care a rap for golf.
And never led cotillions,
But he could sign a check, you see,
For half a dozen millions.

Find him. ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE. Upside down in Mrs. Crocodile's dress.
